

The establishment of Zion, foretold in ancient and modern scripture, is above all a gathering of minds and hearts—an education of souls. It is this education that Arthur Henry King, Chauncey Riddle, and Hugh Nibley have devoted themselves to pursuing and sharing. To be with them now, face to face, and to hear them discuss the education of Zion together, is an education in itself and a sweet taste of the Zion to come. ✦ ARTHUR HENRY KING, internationally recognized for his research on Shakespeare, served 28 years on the British Council, lecturing and teaching at universities throughout the world, and was twice decorated by the Queen. He joined the LDS Church in 1965, and in 1971 became a faculty member at BYU, where he has inspired a generation of students and faculty to pursue a gospel-centered education. ✦ CHAUNCEY RIDDLE, a former department chair, dean and assistant academic vice-president, has taught philosophy at BYU for 40 years. He has shown Latter-day Saints that they can unflinchingly examine and critique the thinking underlying contemporary disciplines, fully confident that in doing so, their understanding and appreciation of the restored gospel will be deepened and renewed. ✦ HUGH NIBLEY, a renowned scholar of ancient languages and history, has led numerous Latter-day Saints to increase their faith by pursuing a higher education. A prolific writer, a keen and witty observer, and a relentless critic of the worldly, he has helped church members to see themselves and their struggles in the context of religious history, in ways which will be explored for years to come.
